JUDGE H. C. MCKEE

Surprises His Many Friends by Getting Married to Miss Margaret Trimble.

Last Friday morning the many friends of Judge H. Clay McKee were very much surprised when a telegram was received from Columbia, Mo., stating that he had been married to Miss Margaret Trimble on the evening before.

Miss Trimble was only recently the guest of Mr. John Stofer, of city and made many friends while here. She is an elegant lady, charming in her manner, bewitching her ways and will make Judge McKee an estimable life-partner.

Judge McKee is one of our most prominent business men. He is lawyer by profession but is also an extensive real estate dealer and is one of our most progressive and enterprising citizens and it is with much pleasure that we join the couple's many friends with hearty congratulations.

From the Columbia (Mo.) Daily Tribune we take the following:

Judge H. Clay McKee, a prominent citizen of Mt. Sterling, Ky., came quietly into Columbia on the Wabash from St. Louis yesterday and left at 9 o'clock in the evening taking with him as a bride one of Columbia's most charming young ladies, Miss Margaret Trimble.

The wedding was a surprise to every one, not even the most intimate friends of the family having any intimation that a marriage was contemplated. The wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. Jasper Howell, pastor of the Baptist church who had been invited to a surprise party by Capt. S. A. Smoke. Dr. Howell's surprise came a few minutes after when he was asked to perform the wedding ceremony. This he did at the Trimble home on South Ninth street, in the presence of Judge Geo. W. Trimble, father of bride, Mrs. Samuel A. Smoke, her sister, Capt. S. A. Smoke and Samuel A. Smoke, Jr.

Judge and Mrs. McKee left at once for an extended bridal tour. They will return for visit to their family in the early summer when they expect to take an extended cross country trip in their touring car and will pass through Columbia. The many warm friends of the bride in Columbia, where she was born and reared, extend congratulations and wish Judge and Mrs. McKee much happiness.

REV. W. J. BOLIN

Accepts Call to the South Baptist Church at Knoxville—Will Leave May 1st.

At a meeting of the deacons of the Baptist church Sunday afternoon Rev. W. J. Bolin expressed his intention of tendering his resignation as pastor of the Baptist church of this city to take effect May 1st, 1911 and has accepted a call to the South Baptist church at Knoxville, Tenn.

Rev. Bolin is one of the ablest, best posted and most loved of any minister who ever occupied a pulpit in Mt. Sterling and it is with genuine regret we see him leave this city. His sermons are always delivered in an inimitable manner and show careful and intelligent study.

Rev. Bolin was not only very popular with his congregation but was equally popular with all of our citizens who enjoyed his acquaintances. We sincerely trust that his work in his new field will be pleasant and successful and are sure it will be if his congregation will co-operate with him in his work.

Rev. Hobbs Accepts Call to Shelbyville, Tenn.

MT. STERLING BOOMING

Property Higher than Ever Known before—Many New Buildings to be Erected This Spring

Contracts have already been let for the erection of twenty new residences to be built at once and the indications are that there will be more building going on this spring than was ever known here before.

Business is good, rent is high and property is selling at the highest prices ever heard of in this section.

Mt. Sterling is truly an ideal city and capitalists seeking to make an investment could not do better than come here. We have electric lights, gas, water works, a splendid sewer system, an excellent telephone system, fine prospects for brick streets at an early date and many other advantages too numerous to mention.

Our citizens are congenial, thrifty and enterprising. Our Business Men's Club is composed of men with a keen insight into business affairs which works for the betterment of our city.

Among the new homes to be built this spring are one each by R. A. Chiles, Leslie McCormick, Mrs. Mary Schlegel, John Thomas, Matt Tyler, E. F. Robertson, M. C. Foley, John G. Winn, Mrs. Mary Moore, George Anderson, Chenault & O'Rear, Arthur Bybee, Leslie McCormick, Jesse Morgan, and Mrs. J. W. Barnes. There is only one vacant residence in the city and there are several applicants for it.

Capitalists who have money can come to Mt. Sterling, buy lots and build rentable cottages and double their money within a few years. The opportunity is the best in the State.

Harry Waller Dies of Tuberculosis

At 8:30 o'clock Monday night the death angel again visited our city and took from our midst to its Maker the soul of Harry Waller. Mr. Waller had been sick for many months and while it has been known for some time that he could not possibly get well the end was hardly expected so soon. Realizing the end was not far off several weeks ago he expressed his faith in his God and became a member of the Methodist Church.

Harry Waller was born and raised in this city. He was a young man of pleasing address, quick to make friends and generous to a fault. He is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Waller, of this city and one brother, Frank Waller of Lexington. We join the many friends in extending our sympathy.

Resigns Position.

Jas. C. French, has resigned his position with W. S. Lloyd and has been succeeded by Howard Brown. Mr. Brown has had several years experience in the drug business and is a competent and worthy young man.

It is not known in what business Mr. French will engage but it is hoped he will decide to remain in our city.

Death of Butler Hall.

Mr. Butler Hall who has been in a sanatorium in Lexington for some time died last week and his remains were brought to this city for interment. Mr. Hall was 60 years of age and is survived by several children.

Mr. James Guilfoile, Sr. one of the oldest citizens of Montgomery county died at 8 o'clock last Thursday night of quick pneumonia after an illness lasting only a few days. Mr. Guilfoile was taken sick and died at the home of his daughter Mrs. Joe Drennan.

Mr. Guilfoile was born in Ireland but came to this country when quite a young man.

"Uncle Jimmy" as he was called by his host of friends was a kind-hearted, affectionate man and his death will be the source of much sadness to his many friends. He was a man of strong convictions and was a loyal party worker in the ranks of Democracy.

The funeral services were held at St. Patrick's church at 2 o'clock Saturday conducted by Rev. Father T. J. McCaffrey. Burial in Saint Thomas' cemetery. ## Horse Talk

There are forty horses at the Montgomery County Fair grounds doing light training and indications are that when the season begins in earnest there will be many more.

Among the many good ones quartered there are: J. Malcolm Forbes, Sim Axworthy, Mainleaf, Lucile Brooks, Sister Ella, Treddell and Peter McCormick. These horses have all shown good speed and great things are expected of them this season. Mr. Richard Curtis has charge of J. R. Magowan's string; H. B. Van Evera of Mr. Little's and Charles Bean is conducting a public training stable besides working several horses of his own.

The track is in good condition and with a little work can be made very fast.

Anyone having stock to train will wisely bring them to our city.

blankly for a moment, then nodded.
"And there are windows, you know," Mr. Grimm went on, then: "As I understand it, Monsieur, no one except you and the stenographer saw the ambassador after ten o'clock in the morning?"

"Oui, Monsieur, C'est—" Monsieur Rigolot began excitedly. "I beg pardon, I believe that is correct."

You saw him about ten, you say; therefore no one except the stenographer saw him after ten o'clock?"

"That is also true, as far as I know."

"Any callers? Letters? Telegrams? Telephone messages?"

"I made inquiries in that direction, Monsieur," was the reply. "I have the words of the servants at the door and of the stenographer that there were no callers, and the statement of the stenographer that there were no telephone calls or telegrams. There were only four letters for him personally. He left them all on his desk—here they are."

Mr. Grimm looked them over leisurely. They were commonplace enough, containing nothing that might be construed into a reason for the disappearance.

"The letters Monsieur Boisseguer had dictated were laid on his desk by the stenographer," Monsieur Rigolot rushed on volubly, excitedly. "In the anxiety and uneasiness following the disappearance they were allowed to remain there overnight. On Wednesday morning, Monsieur"—and he hesitated impressively—"those letters bore his signature in his own handwriting!"

Mr. Grimm turned his listless eyes full upon Monsieur Rigolot's perturbed face for one scant instant.

"No doubt of it being his signature?" he queried.

"Non, Monsieur, non!" the secretary exclaimed emphatically. "Vous avez—that is, I have known his signature for years. There is no doubt. The letters were not of a private nature. If you would care to look at the copies of them?"

He offered the duplicates tentatively. Mr. Grimm read them over slowly, while Monsieur Rigolot sat nervously staring at him. They, too, seemed meaningless as bearing on the matter in hand. Finally, Mr. Grimm nodded and Monsieur Rigolot resumed:

"And Wednesday night, Monsieur, another strange thing happened. Monsieur Boisseguer smokes many cigarettes, of a kind made especially for him in France, and shipped to him here. He keeps them in a case on his dressing table. On Thursday morning his valet reported to me that this case of cigarettes had disappeared!"

"Of course," observed Mr. Grimm, "Monsieur Boisseguer has a latch-key to the embassy?"

"Of course."

"Anything unusual happen last night—that is, Thursday night?"

"Nothing, Monsieur—that is, nothing we can find."

Mr. Grimm sat silent for a time and fell to twisting the seal ring on his finger. Mr. Campbell turned around and moved a paper weight one inch to the left, where it belonged, while Monsieur Rigolot, disappointed at their amazing apathy, squirmed uneasily in his chair.

"It would appear, then," Mr. Grimm remarked, musingly, "that after his mysterious disappearance the ambassador has either twice returned to his house at night, or else sent some one there, first to bring the letters to him for signature, and later to get his cigarettes?"

"Certainly, Monsieur—I mean, that seems to be true. But where is he? Why should he not come back? What does it mean? Madame Boisseguer is frantic, prostrated! She wanted me to go to the police, but I did not think it wise that it should become public, so I came here."

"Very well," commented Mr. Grimm. "Let it rest as it is. Meanwhile you may reassure madame. Point out to her that if Monsieur Boisseguer signed the letters Tuesday night he was, at least, alive; and if he came or sent for the cigarettes Wednesday night, he was still alive. I shall call at the embassy this afternoon. No, it isn't advisable to go with you now. Give my latch-key, please."

Monsieur Rigolot produced the key and passed it over without a word.

"And one other thing," Mr. Grimm continued, "please collect all the revolvers that may be in the house and take charge of them yourself. If any one, by chance, heard a burglar prowling around there tonight he might shoot, and in that event either kill Monsieur Boisseguer or—or me!"

When the secretary had gone Mr. Campbell idly drummed on his desk as he studied the face of his subordinate.

"So much!" he commented finally. "It's Miss Thorne again," said the young man as if answering a question.

"Perhaps these reports I have received today from the Latin capitals may aid you in dispelling that mystery," Campbell suggested, and Mr. Grimm turned them over eagerly. "Meanwhile our royal visitor, Prince Benedetto d'Abruzzi, remains unknown?"

The young man's teeth closed with a snap.

"It's only a question of time, Chief," he said abruptly. "I'll find him—I'll find him!"

And he sat down to read the reports.

CHAPTER XIII.

A Conference in the Dark.

The white rays of the distant arc light filtered through the half-drawn velvet hangings and laid a faintly illumined path across the ambassador's desk; the heavy leather chairs were mere impalpable splotches in the shadows; the cut-glass knobs of the mahogany cabinet caught the glint of light and reflected it dimly. Outside was the vague, indefinable night drone of a city asleep, unbroken by any sound that was distinguishable, until finally there came the distant boom of a clock. It struck twice.

Seated on a couch in one corner of the ambassador's office was Mr. Grimm. He was leaning against the high arm of leather, with his feet on the seat, thoughtfully nursing his knees. His attitude indicated anything except sheer comfort, it was that he was listening. He had been there for two hours, wide awake, and absolutely motionless. Five, ten, fifteen minutes more passed, and then Mr. Grimm heard the grind and whirr of an automobile a block or so away, coming toward the embassy. Now it was in front.

"Honk! Hon-on-onk!" it called plaintively. "Hon-onk! Honk!"

The signal! At last! The automobile went rushing on, full tilt, while Mr. Grimm removed his feet from the floor. Thus, with his hands on his knees, and listening, listening with every faculty strained, he sat motionless, peering toward the open door that led into the hall. The car was gone now, the sound of it swallowed up in the distance, still he sat there. It was obviously some noise in the house for which he was waiting.

Minute after minute passed, and still nothing. There was not even the whisper of a wind-stirred drapery. He was about to rise, when, suddenly, with no other noise than that of the sharp click of the switch, the electric lights in the room blazed up brilliantly. The glare dazzled Mr. Grimm with its blinding flood, but he didn't move. Then softly, almost in a whisper:

"Good evening, Mr. Grimm."

It was a woman's voice, pleasant, unsurprised, perfectly modulated. Mr. Grimm certainly did not expect it now, but he knew it instantly—there was not another quite like it in the wide, wide world—and though he was still blinking a little, he came to his feet courteously.

"Good morning, Miss Thorne," he corrected gravely.

Now his vision was clearing, and he saw her, a graceful figure, silhouetted against the rich green of the wall draperies. Her lips were curled the least bit, as if she might have been smiling, and her wonderful eyes reflected a glint of—was it amusement? The folds of her evening dress fell away from her, and one bare, white arm was extended, as her hand still rested on the switch.

"And you didn't hear me?" still in the half-whisper. "I didn't think you would. Now I'm going to put out the lights for an instant, while you pull the shades down, and then—then we must have a—a conference."

The switch snapped. The lights died as suddenly as they had been born, and Mr. Grimm, moving noiselessly, visited each of the four windows in turn. Then the lights blazed brilliantly again.

"Just for a moment," Miss Thorne explained to him quietly, and she handed him a sheet of paper. "I want you to read this—read it carefully—I shall turn out the lights again. They are dangerous. After that we may discuss the matter at our leisure."

Mr. Grimm read the paper while Miss Thorne's eyes questioned his impassive face. At length he looked up indolently, listlessly, and the switch snapped. She crossed the room and sat down; Mr. Grimm sat beside her.

"I think, Miss Thorne suggested tentatively, "that that accounts perfectly for Monsieur Boisseguer's disappearance."

"It gives one explanation, at least," Mr. Grimm assented musingly. "Kidnapped—he held prisoner—fifty thousand dollars demanded for his safety and release." A pause. "And to whom, may I ask, was this demand addressed?"

"To Madame Boisseguer," replied Miss Thorne. "I have the envelope in which it came. It was mailed at the general post office at half-past one o'clock this afternoon, so the canceling stamp shows, and the envelope was addressed, as the letter was written, on a typewriter."

And now, inquired Mr. Grimm, after a long pause, "how did it come into your possession?" He waited a little. "Why didn't Monsieur Rigolot report this development to me this afternoon when I was here?"

"Monsieur Rigolot did not inform you of it because he did not know of himself," she replied, answering the last question first. "It came into my possession directly from the hands of Madame Boisseguer—she gave it to me."

"Why?"

Mr. Grimm was peering through the inscrutable darkness, straight into her face—a white dab in the gloom, shapeless, indistinct.

"I have known Madame Boisseguer or half a dozen years," Miss Thorne continued, in explanation. "We have been friends that long. I met her in 'Oklahoma,' later in Berlin, and within a few weeks, here in Washington. You see I have traveled in the time I have been an agent for my government. Well, Madame Boisseguer received this letter about half-past four o'clock this afternoon; and about half-past five she sent for me and placed it in my hands, together with the singular details following upon the ambassador's disappearance. So, it would seem that you and I are allies for this once, and the problem is already solved. There merely remains the task of finding and releasing the ambassador."

Mr. Grimm sat perfectly still. "And why," he asked, slowly, "are you here now?"

"For the same reason that you are here," she replied readily, "to see for myself if the—the person who twice came here at night—once for the ambassador's letters and once for his cigarettes—would, by any chance, make another trip. I knew you were here, of course."

"You knew I was here," repeated Mr. Grimm musingly. "And may I?"

"Just as you knew that I, or some one, at least, had entered this house a few minutes ago," she interrupted. "The automobile horn outside was a signal, wasn't it? Hastings was in the car? Or was it Blair or Johnson?"

Mr. Grimm did not say.

"Didn't you anticipate any personal danger when you entered?" he queried instead. "Weren't you afraid I might shoot?"

"No."

There was a long silence. Mr. Grimm still sat with his elbows on his knees, staring at the vague white spot which was Miss Thorne's face and bare neck. One of her white arms hung at her side like a pallid serpent, and her hand was at rest on the seat of the couch.

"It seems, Miss Thorne," he said at length casually, "that our paths of duty are inextricably tangled. Twice previously we have met under circumstances that were more than strange, and now—this! Whatever injustice I may have done you in the past by my suspicions has, I hope, been forgiven; and in each instance we were able to work side by side toward a conclusion. I am wondering now if this singular affair will take a similar course."

He paused. Miss Thorne started to speak, but he silenced her with a slight gesture of his hand.

"It is only fair to you to say that we—that is, the Secret Service—have learned many things about you," he resumed in the same casual tone. "We have, through our foreign agents, traced you step by step from Rome to Washington. We know that you are, in a way, a representative of a sovereign of Europe; we know that you were on a secret mission to the Spanish court, perhaps for this sovereign, and remained in Madrid for a month; we know that from there you went to Paris, also on a secret mission—perhaps the same—and remained there for three weeks; we know that you met diplomatic agents of those governments later in London. We know all this; we know the manner of your coming to this country; of your coming to Washington. But we don't know why you are here."

"Precisely as you must account for it if you have studied the situation here as I have," responded Mr. Grimm. "For instance, sitting at his desk there"—and he turned to indicate it—"he could readily see out the windows overlooking the street. There is only a narrow strip of lawn between the house and the sidewalk. Now, if some one on the sidewalk, or—or—"

"In a carriage?" promptly suggested Miss Thorne.

"Or in carriage," Mr. Grimm supplemented, "had attracted his attention—some one he knew—it is not at all unlikely that he rose, for no apparent reason, as he did do, passed along the hall—"

"And through the French window, across the lawn to the carriage, and not a person in the house would have seen him go out? Precisely! There seems no doubt that was the way," she mused. "And, of course, he must have entered the carriage of his own free will?"

"In other words, on some pretext or other, he was lured in, then made prisoner, and—!"

He paused suddenly and his hand met Miss Thorne's warningly. The silence of the night was broken by the violent clatter of footsteps, apparently approaching the embassy. The noise was unmistakable—some one was running.

"The window!" Miss Thorne whispered.

She rose quickly and started to cross the room to look out; Mr. Grimm sat motionless, listening. An instant later and there came a tremendous crash of glass—the French window in the hallway by the sound—then rapid footsteps, still running along the hall. Mr. Grimm moved toward the door unrrued, perfectly self-possessed; there was only a narrowing of his eyes at the shrillness and clatter of proves to my imagination that you are not the individual I was waiting for to-night."

"You don't mean that you suspect—" she began in a tone of amazement.

"I don't mean that I suspect anything," he interposed. "I mean merely that you haven't convinced me. There's nothing inconsistent in the fact that you are what you say you are, and that in spite of that, you came tonight for—"

He was interrupted by a laugh, a throaty, silvery note that he remembered well. His idle hands closed spasmodically, only to be instantly relaxed.

"Suppose, Mr. Grimm, I should tell you that immediately after Madame Boisseguer placed the matter in my hands this afternoon, I went straight to your office to show this letter to you and ask for your assistance?" she inquired.

"Suppose that I left my card for you with a clerk there on being informed that you were out—remember I knew you were on the case from Madame Boisseguer—would that indicate anything except that I wanted to put the matter squarely before you, and work with you?"

"We will suppose that much," Mr. Grimm agreed.

"That is a statement of fact," Miss Thorne added. "My card, which you will find at your office, will show that when I left your office I went to the hotel where you live, with the same purpose. You were not there, and I left a card for you. And that is a statement of fact. It was not difficult, owing to the extraordinary circumstances, to imagine that you would be here tonight—just as you are—and I came here. My purpose, still, was to inform you of what I knew, and work with you. Does that convince you?"

"And how did you enter the embassy?" Mr. Grimm persisted.

"Not with a latch-key, as you did," she replied. "Madame Boisseguer, at my suggestion, left the French window in the hall there unfastened, and I came in that way—the way, I may add, that Monsieur l'Ambassadeur went out when he disappeared."

"Very well!" commented Mr. Grimm, and finally: "I think, perhaps, I owe you an apology, Miss Thorne—another one. The circumstances now, as they were at our previous meeting, are so unusual that—is it necessary to go on?" There was a certain growing deference in his tone. "I wonder if you account for Monsieur Boisseguer's disappearance as I do?" he inquired.

"I dare say," and Miss Thorne leaned toward him with sudden eagerness in her manner and voice. "Your theory is—?" she questioned.

"If we believe the servants we know that Monsieur Boisseguer did not go out either by the front door or the side door.

Mr. Grimm did not say.

" Didn't you anticipate any personal danger when you entered?" he queried instead.

"I, too, was afraid," she admitted.

"Yes, yes," Miss Thorne interpolated. "And the circumstances attending the disappearance? How do you account for the fact that he went, evidently of his own will?"

"Precisely as you must account for it if you have studied the situation here as I have," responded Mr. Grimm. "For instance, sitting at his desk there—and he turned to indicate it—"he could readily see out the windows overlooking the street. There is only a narrow strip of lawn between the house and the sidewalk. Now, if some one on the sidewalk, or—or—"

"In a carriage?" promptly suggested Miss Thorne.

"Or in carriage," Mr. Grimm supplemented, "had attracted his attention—some one he knew—it is not at all unlikely that he rose, for no apparent reason, as he did do, passed along the hall—"

"And through the French window, across the lawn to the carriage, and not a person in the house would have seen him go out? Precisely! There seems no doubt that was the way," she mused. "And, of course, he must have entered the carriage of his own free will?"

"In other words, on some pretext or other, he was lured in, then made prisoner, and—!"

He paused suddenly and his hand met Miss Thorne's warningly. The silence of the night was broken by the violent clatter of footsteps, apparently approaching the embassy. The noise was unmistakable—some one was running.

"The window!" Miss Thorne whispered.

READ IT "DUTIFUL ROOSTER"

Recipient of Weedon Grossmith's Poetic Compliment Could Not Make Out His Fancy Writing.

Weedon Grossmith, at a dinner in New York, praised America.

"And I like American art," he said, "the art of your magazines and newspapers and novels and pictures. It's a direct art. It can't be misunderstood."

"Directness, plainness, is always best. I now write a direct, plain hand, but I used to write a confused one, all flourishes and curls, and as a result I often got in trouble."

"For example, a friend of mine sent me, by way of Christmas card, a photograph of his wife and five beautiful children. I wrote to the wife in acknowledgment of this charming picture. I told her poetically that she looked like a beautiful rose tree—she being the tree, you know, and her children the roses."

"But my wretched, confused hand spoiled everything, and the next day my friend demanded indignantly over the telephone:

"Grossmith what the deuce do you mean by writing to my wife and telling her she looks like a 'dutiful rooster'?"

MAKE THE SERMONS BETTER

Dr. Charles F. Aked Points His Lesson to Preachers With a Story About Gladstone.

"The preacher who complains of poor or inattentive congregations," said Dr. Charles F. Aked, in a recent address in New York, "would perhaps do better to devote to the improvement of his sermons the time spent on these complaints."

"This type of preacher generally belongs to the Cannes class which Mrs. Gladstone naively condemned.

"Mrs. Gladstone and her famous husband went to Cannes one January, and on Sunday morning, of course, they repaired to the English church.

"But when the sermon began Mr. Gladstone frowned and squirmed, then whispered to Mrs. Gladstone, fretfully:

"I can't hear him."

"But Mrs. Gladstone, whose ears were better, said to her husband with a reassuring smile:

"Never mind, dear. Go to sleep. It will do you ever so much more good."

UP-TO-DATE ADVERTISING.

This is an extract from the diary of the little heroine in Kate Trible Sharber's story, "The Annals of Ann," which proves the sharpness of youthful observation: "No matter how fine a doctor a lady's husband is she is never permitted to mention it to her friends, for this is called 'unethical.' But if she's expecting company of an afternoon she can happen to have a bottle with a queer thing inside on the mantelpiece, and when the company asks what on earth the thing is she can say, 'For goodness' sake! My husband must have forgotten that. Why, that's Senator Hinckley's appendix!"

WIVES OF SCIENTIFIC MEN.

Mme. Curie, who is probably the leader among women who have discovered things, became interested in chemistry through work with her husband and with him made the discovery of radium. Lady Huggins, wife of Sir William Huggins, the noted astronomer, is her husband's sole assistant in his observatory. Mrs. Walter Maundier is vice-president of the British Astronomical Observatory and has written some books. The wife of Professor Roberts has also helped him in his work.

ARCHITECTURAL.

When Woodrow Wilson was making his campaign for the governorship of New Jersey, he was asked to speak at the dedication of a new building in Jersey City. In the course of his remarks, he had something to say about architecture. "These modern New York hotels," he declared, "remind me, in their architectural style, of a cross between the early Pullman and the late North German Lloyd periods."

Death of E. H. Patterson.

Mr. E. H. Patterson, formerly of this city, died at his home at Porterville, California, Sunday March 12th, 1911, of rheumatism and fever. Mr. Patterson was widely known in Kentucky and for years was a dealer in mountain timber lands which made him immensely rich, but he made bad investments in a boom town and lost everything. About six years ago he went to California and went into the gold fields, where he had been very successful, regaining considerable of his lost wealth, but the climate did not agree with him and he became ill.

While here Mr. Patterson was engaged in the banking business and married Mrs. Hoffman, who survives him, with one daughter, Mrs. James Jeffries, of Pikeville, Bell county, to which city the body was brought for burial. Mr. Patterson is also survived by a step-son, Mr. Roger Hoffman, and a sister-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Harper, of this city. Mr. Patterson was about 56 years of age.

To the bereaved family the ADVOCATE joins their many friends in extending deepest sympathy.

Modern Genesis.

In the beginning God created the Heaven and the Earth, then he created the Editor and the liberal advertiser which he pronounced not only good but very good.

The next day he created the man who does not believe in advertising and does not take his home paper. Then he rested from his work. The third day the Devil took possession and created the man who takes his county paper for several years and fails to pay for it and on the next day out of the refuse lump of creation he created a thing called a man who pays his subscription by telling the postmaster to mark his paper refused for that he never subscribed for it although he had taken it out of the office and read it for ten years and the Devil was delighted with his work.—Exchange.

Stomach Troubles Cured by Vinol

"I suffered so long from stomach trouble and indigestion, that I lost flesh rapidly—VINOL cured me after everything else had failed. It strengthened my digestive organs—gave me a hearty appetite, and I can eat anything without the slightest distress. I do not believe anything equals VINOL for stomach trouble and indigestion."

W. E. WATERHOUSE,

Portland, Me.

Mr. Thos. G. Wallace, of Detroit, Mich., writes, "I suffered for years from a chronic stomach trouble. VINOL entirely cured me after everything else had failed."

It is the curative medicinal elements of the cod's liver, combined with the strengthening properties of tonic iron contained in VINOL, which makes it so successful in restoring perfect digestion, and at the same time building up the weak and run-down system.

Try a bottle of VINOL with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

After the wedding the young couple drove to the bridegroom's home, where an elegant reception was tendered them by his father, Mr. Henry Gillaspie. ### BRICK STREETS.

As we go to press Tuesday evening, we are reliably informed that the City Council at its meeting to-night will order brick streets constructed on Broadway and Court streets, on Maysville street, from the depot to High street, and on Main street, from the Methodist Church to the Christian Church. In the center of Broadway and Court streets a grass plot of some fifteen feet in width has been suggested. This will reduce the cost considerably, these streets being very wide, and at the same time add to their attractiveness. While this is all that can conveniently be included in the first contract, it is by no means all the work that will be done, but is merely a beginning.

By about May 1st the necessary legal steps will be taken and actual work commenced. There is nothing Mt. Sterling needs as badly as brick streets and to the present City Administration must be given the credit for this much needed improvement. The men composing it have shown themselves to be men who do things, and upon behalf of our citizens we thank them for the capable and faithful manner in which they guard the people's interests.

We have read a great deal lately about a platform. If those crying for it will keep their shirts on, we have no doubt that the correct thing will be done at the proper time.

We heard a stranger remark the other day that Kentucky had certainly undergone a great change, adding that even our W. C. T. U. Fountain had gone dry.

The Republican State Committee has been called to meet April 1st. What an appropriate date.

PATTI ROSA

Patti Rosa, daughter of the late famous little actress of that name, is leading support with the Lyman Twins Brothers in their new musical production, "The Prize Winners."

When asked how long she had been on the road replied as long as I can remember, with the exception of my years at school in the convent at Kankakee, Ill. "You see, I was a little girl," she said, "when mamma toured through here in "Bob," "Zipp," "A Girl's Way," "Little Miss Dixie," and her other successes. In her company at that time was Joe Cawthorn, now one of our leading comedians, George Boni face, Jr., later famous in the Broadhurst farces." When the subject of her mother's famous collection of emblems which were noted all over the country at that time, was brought up, the younger Patti said, "Yes I have them all and am as proud of them as any king could be of his crown." — Tabb Opera House, April 1.

Shooting Affray at Stanton.

A sensational shooting occurred in the courtroom in the Powell county courthouse Monday just as Judge Benton was leaving the bench during a recess. The Rev. Nelson McIntosh, aged 87, was shot and severely wounded by Berry Barnett.

Both men live at Clay City and an old grudge existed between them, Rev. Mr. McIntosh having been indicted some months ago charged with having attempted to shoot Barnett.

The Rev. Mr. McIntosh had just appealed to the court to give him an immediate trial upon the indictment pending, and Judge Benton had announced that the case would be heard as soon as it could be reached when Barnett drew his revolver. The shot, fired as Judge Benton was leaving the bench, struck McIntosh just above the right ear. The wound is not regarded as necessarily fatal. Barnett was arrested.

HAPPY RESULTS

Have Made Many Mt. Sterling Residents Enthusiastic

No wonder scores of Mt. Sterling citizens grow enthusiastic. It is enough to make anyone happy to find relief after years of suffering. Public statements like the following are but truthful representations of the daily work done in Mt. Sterling by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Robert Sheridan, So. Queen St., Mt. Sterling, Ky., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for two years and have found them to be a remedy that lives up to representations. I suffered greatly from lumbago which came on by attacks, some of which were so severe that I could hardly get around. I had pains through my back and kidneys, at times extending into my shoulders. I was also annoyed by irregular passages of the kidney secretions and I think that the hard work on the railroad was responsible for my suffering. I was unable to find relief until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at F. C. Duerson's Drug Store. They gave me prompt relief and I continued taking them until I was cured."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Better Days.

At a recent New York banquet a speaker compared unfavorably the lives and the times of grandfathers and grandmothers now with those of the good old days. Fifty or one hundred years hence, no doubt, there will be oratory of the same description. The good old days are always those of youth, and in the matter of grandparents where shall we find any to equal those with whom we were acquainted in childhood?

It is well enough for after-dinner entertainers to praise the courtesy and dignity of their own grandfathers and grandmothers, but it is in keeping with good breeding to cast reflections upon those of the present day? Because New Yorkers who have grandchildren do not live and dress and divert themselves exactly as did the elderly people in rural districts fifty years ago, is it to be concluded that they are deficient in all the joys and graces?

Grandparents fifty years ago faced a bloody war growing out of slavery. Their knowledge of sanitation was so limited that they ascribed to mysterious Providence deaths that are now known to be preventable. Most of their lives they had seen all about them the keenest suffering that is now relieved by anaesthetics. They knew nothing of antiseptic surgery.

They witnessed shocking oppressions of women and children. They lived at a time when genius was thought to manifest itself in a love for strong drink and when nearly every family had its drunkard. They did not know the true meaning of free labor. They were familiar in most small neighborhoods with the insane or idiotic who were confined in outhouses or permitted to roam the highways. Their few newspapers were vituperative and their pulpits were full of denominational rascality. Many of the richest of them lived in houses poorly heated and ill-ventilated. Books were scarce, and elevating amusements outside of the larger towns were almost unknown.

There was a difference then as there is to-day between the grandparents who lived in the cities and those who lived in the country, but comparing either class now with those of fifty years ago, we shall find that in knowledge, laws, manners, customs, humanity, public service, progressiveness, charity, comfort, diversions, even morals, grandparents now as a rule have no reason to envy the lot of their own grandparents two generations ago. Our romantic literature is highly misleading on all these points. It concerns itself with the parlor of the front porch. It conceals the deprivations, the makeshifts, the ignorance and the brutalities that too often lay behind.

There were gentle people in those days, of course, but there are many more of them now. There were courtesy and benevolence then, but nothing to compare with what there is now. There was contentment then among those who were satisfied with things as they were, but the better times that we now see were hastened by thousands who happily were not content. We have in this era many whose lives are artificial, vulgar, dissipated and sordid, but the older civilization bred them too, and it honored them as a rule rather more than we do.

Men who long for a return to the old conditions do not know what they are talking about. If this Nation could be subjected to those conditions tomorrow it would present a spectacle of unexampled wretchedness.—New York World.

Will You Help?

722 West Main Street,
LEXINGTON, KENTUCKY.
If you close your eyes and try to realize what it is to be blind, you fail, because, though you are helpless, you are not hopeless—you do not with Milton cry,

.....Thus with the year
Seasons return, but not to me returns
Day or the sweet return of ev'n or morn.
Or sight of vernal bloom, or summer's rose.
Or flocks, or herds, or human face divine.
But cloud instead, and ever during dark."

If you remember how uncomfortable you were because of a cinder in your eye, you can partially realize what it is to have one's eyes scratched, not for hours only, but for long years, by lid granulation, trachoma, which, if neglected, results in impairment of the sight, often in blindness, and withal is so infectious that the United States Government forbids any person afflicted with it to enter our country. Does not this realization, partial though it is, stir you to sympathy?

In Kentucky, in those isolated mountain regions, where there are no oculists, very many persons are suffering from trachoma and other serious eye diseases. Many will continue to suffer unless they receive such help as shall enable them to come to skillful specialists for treatment. Such help we try to give them.

When you learn that many of the most distinguished oculists, physicians, and surgeons of Lexington give professional services absolutely free to all such sufferers as we bring down to them for treatment, and the Lexington & Eastern Railroad Company grants us half-fare privileges for these sufferers, and moreover that nearly all of them furnish part of the money necessary for the trip, for the stay here, and for the spectacles, etc., you will readily understand how only a comparatively small expenditure of money on our part makes possible for these sufferers an enormous amount of good.

It was a glorious privilege to bring that young girl to an oculist and to know that the total blindness which was impending was averted—but limit of space prevents our giving details of cases.

You may care to give money or service.

While our attention will continue to be directed largely to helping persons to get cures for diseases of the eyes, ears, nose, or throat, we want to be free to give help now and then to some one who may be suffering with no one of these diseases, but needing medical or surgical treatment for other ailments.

Figgerin' on It.

"We have talked to several farmers in the last week about the road tax, and not one have we found against it. All of them were for keeping it on from year to year till we get good roads all over the county. A prominent farmer who lives twelve miles from town says he could make the trip to town in an hour less time if he had good roads than he does now.

"Another says: The difference in horseshoeing bills on good and bad roads would pay most people's road tax."

"Another, who lives about fourteen miles out, says he can only haul about one-third as much now as he can in the fall when the roads are in good shape; that there are lots of places where an empty wagon makes a good load for two horses. If we had good roads he could haul a full load the year round."—Madisonville Hustler.

In short, here are three Kentucky farmers who have discovered that bad roads mean a loss, good roads, a saving of time and money.

Further they have discovered that the tax for bad roads has to be paid. If enough of Kentucky's farmers make the same discovery between now and next January, the good roads tax bill will become the good roads law.

Good roads mean a larger social life, better educational facilities and increased religious opportunities, as well as a higher value for farm lands and a higher net price for farm products. The people in those States that have good roads have found out these things. It would be asking too much to expect the people of Kentucky, who have been used to bad roads all their lives, to reach the same conclusion without like experience. But the fact that the people in Kentucky are beginning to count the cost of bad roads is a mighty good sign that they will not much longer refuse to pay the price necessary to get good roads.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS

In Montgomery County—Indications are that Tobacco Acreage will Show a Decrease
--A Large Corn Crop Expected

Farmers have been busy sowing tobacco beds and the white cotton can be seen on every pike, but the beds are not as numerous as they have been in former years, and from the best information the acreage in the county will be reduced nearly 1,200 acres from 1910. There being no buyer for the weed in the county, many growers are having it pruned here and shipped to Louisville breaks, but the tobacco that is selling is not bringing any money into the section. Good tenants are hard to get, and are scarce even when they are offered a good thing.

The tobacco situation is bad from a business standpoint, and the tenant, who has to support himself, is going to have a hard row. Merchants in the city and county, who have been carrying tenants throughout the year, and some of them two and three years, have gotten tired of that way of doing business, and say that they will not carry any tobacco tenants this year unless they are absolutely secured by the landlord. This is going to work a hardship on some tenants who have always been carried at the stores.

BIG INCREASE IN CORN CROP
Thousands of acres of corn will be planted, probably one-third increase in the county, while many oats, barley, millet and other feed stuff will be cultivated, and more farmers will handle stock than have done so for years, many getting ready to go into the hog business, which has gotten to be a big money-maker in this section of the country. There has been a scarcity of hogs in Montgomery county for a year or two, but a drive in the country now seems to show that there will be an abundance of them on the market this year.

Sheep and lambs are doing fine, and farmers are having better luck this year than usual. Ewes came out of the winter in fine shape and condition, and are lambing fast and well, very few having lost their young, while twins and triplets are very common to be seen in the fields. The lambs look healthy and are growing with great rapidity. Flocks have been secure, and there has been very little damage done by dogs, while most of the sheep are free from disease.

Cattle are in fine shape, but from present indications on the market it does not look very encouraging to the handlers of export cattle as in most instances the farmer bought them at two high a price to make money on, while yearlings have been selling at almost any price asked for them. Hay, corn, oats and straw have gone down some in price, as have butter and eggs, although good butter is very hard to find for sale.

Clay Hoskins, of Clark county, has rented the Grigsby farm on Lulbegrud, this county, for the ensuing year, and has moved. The farm contains 340 acres and was rented for $2,400, Hoskins being given the right to grow fifteen acres of tobacco, twenty-five acres in corn and the rest in grass.

Richard Thomas, of Bath county, has rented from Richard F. Moore for the coming year and will cultivate ten acres of tobacco and a lot of corn on the shares.

Grand Anderson and family and George W. Teegarden have rented a large farm near Ruthton, Madison county, and have moved to it, while Frank Daniels has rented a farm in Fayette county and has moved there and will crop this year.

Bloodine Cough Checker will quickly allay that hacking irritation accompanying a severe cough or cold. The safest and surest remedy for children. Keep a bottle constantly at hand. Sold by W. S. Lloyd.

Kentuckians Anxious to Go to Mexican Border.

In the opinion of Col. E. B. Bassett, Acting Adjutant General, the militia officers of the entire country are to be sent to the maneuver camps on the Mexican border instead of to the regular camps of instruction, where schools for officers are maintained. Therefore, Col. Bassett believes that all of the officers of the Kentucky National Guard, from Lieutenants up, will be sent to the Mexican border. This applies, of course, only to those who volunteer, as no one will be ordered out for this duty. Col. Bassett believes that all those who apply for assignment will be sent, so that practically all the officers of the Kentucky Guard will go to the camps in Texas.

A LARGE CONTRACT

What W. S. Lloyd Wants Every Person in Mt. Sterling to Do.

When W. S. Lloyd, the enterprising druggist, first offered a 50 cent package of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at half price, and guaranteed to return the money if it did not cure, he thought it probable from his experience with other medicines for these diseases that he would have a good many packages returned. But although he has sold hundreds of bottles, not one has been brought back.

To those suffering with dizziness, headache, poor digestion, constipation and straining, Dr. Howard's specific offers quick relief. It has an invaluable boon to all who feel uncomfortable after eating, and is today the popular dinner pill in all the large cities. 35&37.

Wanted a Cornet.

Sometimes the stenographer is so busy that she cannot take our stuff and then we try to write it. After one of these attempts the other day, the copy was given to "a gentleman of the road," who wanted to put in a little time on the machine for a stake. He eyed it for a few minutes and said to the foreman: "If I had a cornet I might play this piece, but d-d if I can set it."—Lexington Herald.
